March 1987

HOUSE & GARDEN

THE MAGAZINE OF CREATIVE LIVING
Volume 159, Number 3

CLASSICAL COOL
Mica and Ahmet Ertegun's town house reflects a discerning couple's original taste
By Steven M. L. Aronson
100

BUILDING HIS OWN BRIDGES
Brian Alfred Murphy's light-filled house in Santa Monica Canyon
By Joseph Giovannini
112

THE PRIVATE LIBRARIES OF TWO GREAT COLLECTORS:
A PASSION FOR HISTORY
American historic documents and American literature are the focus of Mrs. Charles W. Engelhard's wide-ranging collection
By John Fleming
122

VOLUMINOUS OBSESSION
"You can never be too thin, too rich, or have too many books" By Carter Burden 126

MATISSE, AN INTIMATE SPLENDOR
Reflecting the color and light of the Riviera, Henri Matisse's paintings of his rooms in Nice were inspired by his "storehouse of dreams" By Richard Shone
132

MUSIC, ART AND COUNTRY PLEASURES
Château de Lully, the eighteenth-century home of tenor Hugues Cuenod
By Naomi Barry
140

MYSTERY MANSION
Séances with spirits convinced heiress Sarah Winchester immortality was assured if additions never ceased on her California house
By John Ashbery
148

BEACON HILL SPIRIT
An 1827 house brought back into harmony with its history
By Elaine Greene
154

GREEN ARCHITECTURE
La Mormaire, an English reinterpretation of the classic French garden
By Fleur Champin
162

ON DECORATING
AN EYE FOR COMPLEXITY
Armin B. Allen collects with a scholar's fervor and a taste for the decorative
By Olivier Bernier
172

STYLE OF A LIFETIME
Mrs. F. Burrall Hoffman's distinguished house in Georgetown
By Mary McDougall
178

CASTLETON, COUNTY KILDARE
The first great Palladian house in Ireland, built by the richest man in the country
By the Knight of Glin
184

THE EDITOR'S PAGE
18
By Louis Olvier Gropp

JOURNAL
On the Arts Scene
22

ON THE TABLE
What Makes a Garden?
By William Howard Adams
32

COLLECTING
Silver Futures
By Nicholas Fox Weber
42

CHOICE
What's New, What's Noteworthy

AT THE TABLE
Nostalgia Food
By Ariane Batterberry

DESIGN
Individualist Interiors
By Martin Filler

TRAVEL
Journey to Pagan
By Andrew Harvey

FINE WORK
Textile Tending
By Elaine Greene

ON VIEW
Current Exhibitions
Not to Be Missed
92

House & Garden (ISSN 0018-6406) is published monthly by The Condé Nast Publications Inc., 9100 Wilshire Boulevard, Beverly Hills CA 90212. PRINCIPAL OFFICE: 350 Madison Avenue, New York NY 10017. Robert J. Lapham, President; Eric C. Anderson, Vice President-Treasurer; Pamela van Zandt, Vice President-Secretary. Second-class postage paid at Beverly Hills CA and at additional mailing offices. Subscriptions, in U.S. and possessions, $24 for one year, $46 for two years; in Canada, $38 for one year, $74 for two years. Elsewhere, $41 for one year, payable in advance. Single copies: U.S. $4, Canada $4.90. For subscriptions, address changes, and adjustments, write to House & Garden, Box 5202, Boulder CO 80302. Eight weeks are required for change of address. Please give both new address and old as printed on last label. First copy of a new subscription will be mailed within eight weeks after receipt of order. Authorization as second-class mail by the Post Office Department, Ottawa, and for payment of postage in cash. For further information about anything appearing in this issue, please write to House & Garden Reader Information, Condé Nast Building, 350 Madison Avenue, New York NY 10017. Manuscripts, drawings, and other material submitted must be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope. However, House & Garden cannot be responsible for unsolicited material. Copyright © 1987 by The Condé Nast Publications Inc. All rights reserved. Printed in U.S.A. Postmaster: Send address changes to House & Garden, Box 5202, Boulder CO 80302. SUBSCRIPTION INQUIRIES: Please write to House & Garden, Box 5202, Boulder CO 80302. Address all editorial, business, and production correspondence to House & Garden Magazine, 350 Madison Ave., New York NY 10017.
The façade of Llinda Villa, above, San Jose, California. Right: A wax effigy of widow Sarah Winchester, who acted as her own architect. Far right: The many skylights were thought to have been built to dispel the bad spirits’ shadows.

MYSTERY MANSION

Séances with spirits convinced heiress Sarah Winchester immortality was assured if additions never ceased on what has become a 160-room California landmark

BY JOHN ASHBERY PHOTOGRAPHS BY HENRY ROWLES
A wall of cupboard doors was ideal for quick exits to fool the bad spirits.
A custom staircase for the diminutive Mrs. Winchester

A view to one of many unfinished rooms

A small door by a devil-chasing window leads to a closet

Hooks held Mrs. Winchester's robes for séances with spirits

Slats added to prevent a two-story plunge

One of scores of airshafts on the roof

The switchback staircase has seven turns

Stairs to nowhere with a cupboard for crawl space
Meanwhile, paradoxes abound in the house as it survives today. (At one time there may have been as many as 750 rooms: since the workmen had to be kept busy, destruction, or perhaps de-construction, was as important an activity as building.) Columns are installed upside down, perhaps to baffle further those easily confused evil spirits. Accretions of thirteen occur throughout: thirteen steps here, thirteen palms lining the driveway, thirteen skylights in the greenhouse, and so forth. But at least in the case of a sink drain with thirteen drainage holes arranged in the form of a daisy, Mrs. Winchester could have satisfied her penchant for symbolism at the local hardware store, since the drain was a common model frequently found in homes of the period.

Today the highest point of the house is an observation tower four stories high. But old photographs show a forest of minaret-like towers, some as many as seven stories high. This was before the 1906 earthquake, which did extensive damage to the mansion and apparently caused Mrs. Winchester, who was trapped by debris in one of the bedrooms for several hours, to rethink her construction plans. We are told that she viewed the earthquake as a personal admonition from the good spirits, angry that too much money was being lavished on the front of the house. On the other hand, it is possible that having realized the site's potential for earthquakes, she altered her project accordingly. At any rate, she sealed off the elaborate front door with its Tiffany panels and devoted her energies to expanding the back, prudently directing this stage of building from a houseboat anchored in San Francisco Bay.

The maze as it stands today (viewed from the air, it looks like a late-Victorian village) seems a purposeful hodgepodge. One visitor described his tour of the place as "like wandering through the corridors of a schizophrenic mind." This is perhaps true of some of the gloomier parts, where windows give directly on walls, and doors open on cupboards barely an inch in depth. But elsewhere there is a strange joie de vivre: in the conservatory, for instance, with its ingenious devices for watering plants and recycling the water for the garden; in the "grand ballroom," with its dazzling marquetry and daisy-patterned stained-glass windows set with "mysterious" quotations from Shakespeare. One of the pleasantest, brightest spots is the back door of the original farmhouse through which one perceives an airy vista of cozy and quite ordinary domestic interiors; any weirdness is the result of their random, seemingly effortless proliferation.

It is too bad that Robert Harbison didn't include the Winchester house in his marvelous book Eccentric Spaces, for it certainly belongs there. But his remarks on the space in paintings by the late-Baroque painter Francesco Solimena precisely evoke the mansion's air of lugubrious comedy. "For a number of reasons it is almost impossible to remember afterward what the subject of a Solimena is," he writes. "It is almost impossible to remember this when one is standing in front of it. They are indecipherable not because they are so crowded . . . but because they are deliberately decentralized and unfocused." The impossibility of orienting oneself in the Winchester house is, improbably, part of the charm. Another element is the lack of strong color. Such notes of it as there are come mostly from the exotic woods buffed to a steely glitter and combined in elaborate marquetry patterns whose effect is often one of simplicity, like the heringbone-paneled walls of the ballroom—run-of-the-mill Victorian board-and-batten gone sybaritic and slightly berserk. The impression one retains is of a strong absence of color, or a color like that of ectoplasm: even the Tiffany windows are mostly restrained and pale, while certain other windows made of large sheets of Belgian optical glass slightly magnify the palms and shrubbery outside and draw into the rooms what can only be described as an intense pallor.

The exterior of the house is now painted a rather stifling combination of olive green, ochre and tan (Victorian colors, the guide assures one). Perhaps the colors chosen by Mrs. Winchester were similarly lurid. In any case the multiplication of forms, stately at first but increasingly frenzied as one circles the house, upstages the paint job. The front façade is close to traditional Queen Anne and the isoceles fronts of San Francisco with their "Palladian" and bull's-eye windows, their balco-
MYSTERY MANSION

A PASSION FOR HISTORY

(Continued from page 122) Perhaps it is the busts of Washington and Franklin above the doors or the great Houdon bust of Franklin in the antechamber or simply the proportions. It is fitting since Jane Engelhard was educated in France and lived there for many years. Although she insists, and rightly, that her collection is more American than French, many works and authors have a French connection.

"Actually it's only in the past seventeen years that I have collected in the sense of having a collection," Mrs. Engelhard explains. "Before that it was bits and pieces from people I loved, and I kept their books. All my life I've loved reading. I don't have any books from my childhood, I admit. But don't forget, I went through the war. When we left Europe for Buenos Aires in 1940, we had nothing with us except our passports and our personal belongings. That's where I met Victoria Ocampo. I thought she was just magic. And when I left the Argentine, she came and stayed with me at the Waldorf-Astoria. Hence I have letters and inscribed books from her. James Michener lives right next door to me in New Jersey and comes to stay with me in Florida. I have every one of his books and, as you know, he is a very prolific writer. Alan Moorehead was another great friend. I had been introduced to him in South Africa by Field Marshal Montgomery. I invited him to come to the States, but by the time he came we were in Florida. So he came to our house in Boca Grande and there he wrote The White Nile. Then about a year and a half later he came back and wrote The Blue Nile."

Letters and books by Martin D'Arcy, Basil Hume, and Jerome De Souza reflect both her friendship with these Catholic intellectuals and her concern for the church. Public service has brought still more friendships, and through these friendships many more books, letters, and manuscripts. She served on the Trust-Fund Board of the Library of Congress from 1966 until 1985 and came to know the present Librarian of Congress, Daniel J. Boorstin. "So I set out to collect first editions of every one of his books, and I have them all except one, America and the Image of Europe. We advertised for it, but you can't find it, at least in fine condition. That gives you even more courage to pursue your collecting."

When she began in mid-life to collect rare books and manuscripts seriously, Jane Engelhard started with a few favorite authors: English, French, and American. In a short time she had corralled practically all of W. H. Auden's publications in presentation copies. Soon afterward she completed her T. S. Eliot collection, which includes his Poems (1919), hand-printed and hand-bound by Virginia and Leonard Woolf.

In a few years she began to concentrate on Americans. "After my husband died, I had more time. He liked to collect silver, china, and horses, and I had collected five children in the meantime. I decided I would do something we hadn't done too much together. That was American literature."

One American writer with a special appeal for her was Ernest Hemingway. "I lost three friends in the Spanish Civil War. Hemingway was very important to me because he was saying what I was thinking but couldn't say. So I've tried to collect everything he did. They're fine copies—all first editions and most of them signed." Her collection also contains works ranging from Hemingway's high school newspaper, The Trapeze, to an eight-page preliminary sketch for The Old Man and the Sea—the novel for which he received the Nobel Prize—as well as an important group of autograph letters. She has a presentation copy of his first book, Three Stories & Ten Poems, printed in Paris in 1923, and her copy of In Our Time is inscribed in his typical manner: To Harry Sylveste, the big plain-clothes Jesuit and molder of champions from his old pal E. (One Punch) Hemingway, Heavyweight Champion of the Bahamas, Key West 1931.

F. Scott Fitzgerald is well represented by all of his publications in presentation copies, as is William Carlos Williams with, among others, his rarest publication, the privately printed Poems (1909). And there is a series of letters from Robert Lowell that could inspire a poem: "Lives of great men remind us of letters we ought to burn!"

Also in the collection is the recently discovered Henry James rarity "Daisy Miller: A Study. Four Meetings." This is the very copy in which James had made numerous manuscript revisions and which was used by Ford Madox Ford in his study of James.

American literature, however, does not have the only claim on Jane Engelhard's collecting energies. They are as much if not more directed toward original documents in American history.